VANGO
HURRICANE £300 - £345

The British weather can be unforgiving in the spring, but that shouldn't stop you spending time in the outdoors, especially when you can make use of Vango's collection of technical tents, like the Hurricane, which is built to withstand the most unfriendly of conditions. It has a Protex SPU 5000 ripstop nylon flysheet and a sewn in groundsheet made of HD Nylon 6000, to protect against the wet ground. The Powerlite 7001-T6 alloy poles are light, flexible and durable, so strong winds shouldn't be a problem.

As the name suggests, the Hurricane is super strong. It doesn't have any porch space (although this isn't strictly true, as there's still a bit of room to stick your head out to cook up a quick snack without hitting the elements head on), instead it has a gear loft to keep your belongings close by without taking up floor space. The Hurricane also has front and rear flysheet doors, which makes getting in and out easier. There are plenty of interior pockets for storage and the door is a rain stop flysheet.

BOGINABAG £19.95

We've all been there - miles from anywhere and no convenient spot for... erm... relieving oneself! This is where BoginaBag comes in, making for a comfortable, lightweight solution to your problem. It's essentially a handy stool, so you get two products for the price of one, and when nature calls, you can slip it out of its hardwearing cover, insert one of the specially designed, degradable waste bags, relax... and relieve! The bag completely covers the stool, which makes it all pretty hygienic. Once you have finished you remove the bag, tie the top up using the handles and dispose of it. BoginaBag is the brainchild of Kate Castle, a married mother of two and keen camper. "After hunting around for a portable toilet and dismissing the bulky chemical based options I decided I would develop my own alternative."
